“New Railroad Crossing Surfaces”

Two railroad crossings in Norfolk will provide a smoother ride for vehicles when work is completed later this fall.

Norfolk City officials say the railroad crossings located near 5th Street and Braasch Avenue and near First Street and Klug Avenue will both have the rubber insets replaced by concrete panels.

“The completed project will be similar to what was done at the railroad crossing on Benjamin Avenue a year ago and will provide for a smoother crossing,” said Diane Becker, Communications Coordinator for the City.

It's estimated that each crossing will take several days for completion.
