“Norfolk Fire Division Honors Fallen 911 Rescue Workers”

exposed to in the aftermath of the attack and from suicide.

Members of the City of Norfolk Fire Division took time Friday morning to remember those who lost their lives trying to save others in the attacks on the World Trade Center on September 11, 2001.

Fire Chief Scott Cordes led the short ceremony at the fire station giving recognition to those who had died that day and encouraging those in attendance to remember they don't know what each day may bring, to make the most of their lives and to be sure and tell loved ones how much they mean to them.

Of the 2,977 victims killed in the attacks, 411 were emergency workers including 343 firefighters. Since then, hundreds more have died of diseases related to the toxic fumes and smoke they were
